PEFFER AND FUNERALS.

CALL BRINGS UP THE ARMENIAN

Galusha Grow Monopolizes the Attention of the House With an Old-Time Tariff Speech, Taking For His Text the Late Message of President Cleveland-Other Cap-

WASHINGTON, Dec. 12.-The proceedings of the Senate today were more varied. They covered the entire range of legislation, from the intro-duction of petitions bills and resolutions to the passage of bills, and included the formal addresses. A bill extending the Chicago port of entry so as to cover the state of Illinois received the final endorsement of the Senate, having already passed the House. This will probably be the first bill of the Fifty-fourth Congress to become a law. Almost an hour of the session was devoted to listening to Senator Peffer's advocacy of his bill curtailing the expense incurred in congressional funerals and providing that a sergeant-at-arms shall take the place of the committees now sent out by the two houses as escorts to their homes, of the remains of deceased

The Proceedings.

Senator Thurston, of Nebraska, to-day introduced a bill for the settle-ment of the Pacific raliroads debt. It provides for the sale of the government interest in both the Union Pacific ment interest in both the Union Pacific and Central Pacific railroads, July I, 1896, to the highest bidder, but there shall be no sale unless the bid be at least 50 per cent of the government interest. The bill is very long and devoted mainly to the details of the transfer and the manner of sale, Its main features have been already published.

Republicans Were in Caucus Again

The proceedings of the Senate today began with the presentation of the usual petitions for the recognition of the belligerent rights of the Cuban insurgents.

Mr. Call then addressed the senate upon his resolution, declaring it to be the duty of the civilized powers to suppress the cruelties alleged to be perpetrated upon the Armenian subjects of Turkey by the Turkish authorities. Mr. Call said that while it was the accepted policy of this government to swoid participation in foreign complications, he did not understand it to mean

He objected to regarding the treasury as subject to common plunder for those who choose to prey upon it, and said the best way to get rid of the odlum of such a custom was to stop it. He asked in conclusion that the bill be made the unfinished business of the senate.

The senate then went into executive session, and at 2 p. m. adjourned until WASHINGTON, Dec. 12.-Ex-Speaker Grow, (Rep.) of Pennsylvania, made a speech in the House today of almost an hour on the portion of the presi-dent's message referring to the tariff, in which he compared the old protection tariff laws with the custom laws. He showed that the new law up to Dec. 1 had produced a deficiency of $131,000,000 while under protection measures from 1880 to 1833 the revenues had exceeded the expenditures by $1,310,000,000. He attributed the depletion of 900,000. He attributed the payment of tion tariff laws with the custom laws. the gold reserve to the payment of current reficiencies out of the reserve and maintained that the greenbacks would not menace the reserve if there was sufficient revenue. It being apparent that Secretary Carlisle's report would not be ready this week, th House adjourned over until Monday. The Proceedings.

The House decided on convening today to meet again next Monday.

Mr. Adams, (Rep.) of Pennsylvania, objected to the resolution to appoint Postmaster General Wilson regent of the Smithsonian institute.

Galusha and Tariff.

Mr. Grow read that portion of the message relating to the results of the new tariff now on the statute books. Mr. Grow called attention to the fact that Mr. Cleveland said nothing about the efficiency of the new customs law to produce the revenue necessary to carry on the government. The president, Mr. Grow pointed out, did not give the receipts or the expenditures for last year, yet it was a fact that the deficiency for 1884 was $3,00,000 and for the first five Mr. Grow read that portion of the message relating to the results of the new tariff now on the statute books. Mr. Grow called attention to the fact that Mr. Cleveland said nothing about the efficiency of the new customs law to produce the revenue necessary to carry on the government. The president, Mr. Grow pointed out, did not give the receipts or the expenditures for last year, yet it was a fact that the deficiency for 184 was 83,000,000 and for the first five months of the present fiscal year $18,000,000. The total deficiency since June 39, 1884, was $12,000,000. The bonded debt under the present administration had increased $162,000,000. That had been the result of the new customs system which the president extolled. What of the customs law which preceded it, and which Mr. Cleveland said in his message was insufficient for the purpose of revenue, and which he said "impeded our entrance into the markets of the world."

Mr. Grow said that the McKinley law, as well as every protection measure passed since 1890, had produced more than enough revenue to meet the normal expenses of the government.

From 1883 when the Morrison bill was passed, to 1890, the protection customs system had produced sufficient revenue to meet the regular expense of the government save during the war. From 1880 to 1893, the revenues exceeded expenditures by $1,25,000,000. The last Demoratic administration before the war borrowed money to pay expenses.

Grows Ironical.

Grows Ironical.

The present administration, said Mr Grow, seems to have begun where the Buchanan administration left off. (Appliance and laughter on Republican side.) As to the president's charge that the Mc-kinkey custons law impeded our entrance to the markets of the world, Mr. Grow declared, amid Republican applause, that no market was better than the American market.

"It consists," said he, "of 70,000,000 people who consume more than any people the sun shines on."

For no similar period had the balance of trade been so much in our favor as during the three years the McKinley law was in operation.

An emphatic statement by Mr. Grow that greenbacks would not be retired was received with a demonstration of applause by the Republicans. The president complained that the greenbacks furnished an endless chain by which the gold reserve was depleted. This was not frank. The greenbacks would endanger the reserve as long as the revenues were not equal to the expense, and no longer. Paying the current debts of the government out of the reserve was the road to national bankruptcy.

Mr. Grow referred to the elections last fall as a condemnation of the new tariff law and the policy of the administration and warned the president, "when he had lelsure to attend to public affairs," not to disregard the new command of the people.

The house then at 2:45 adjourned until Mondey.

Yesterday.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 12.-The members of the Republican caucus committee of the belligerent rights of the Cuban insurgents.

Messrs. Cameron and Harris both offered motions for the adjournment of the Senate until Monday, when it is should adjourn today, and the vice-president created a ripple of laughter by putting both motions at once. They were adopted.

Mr. Stewart (Pop.), of Nevada, introduced a resolution instructing the Committee on Finance to inquire into the rates of exchange between the gold stendard and silver standard countries and their effect on the agricultural and manufacturing finterests, and gave notice of a speech on Monday.

Mr. White (Dem.), of California, presented an amendment to the Senate to be relevant to the subject before the Senate.

On motion of Mr. Hanebrough, a resolution was passed calling upon the secretary of agriculture for information as to whether he had expended all or any part of the last appropriation for the purchase and distribution of spend this money.

Duty of Civilized People.

Mr. Call then addressed the senate upon this resolution, declaring it to be the duty of the civilized powers to suppress the cruelties alleged to be perpetuated upon the Armenian subjects of Turkey by the Turkish anthorities.

Mr. Call said that while it was the acceptable realized to be relevant to the varies of the connection of the make and pressed upon the Armenian subjects.

CHRISTIAN ENDEAVOR.

DETROIT, Dec. 12.—The doctors of divinity who make up the trustees of the United Society of Christian Endeavor, were late this morning, and it was nearly noon before they tackled a single item of business. After devotional exercises Rev. H. R. Grose, of Worcester, Mass., was chosen vice-president to act in the absence of President Clark.

The matter of conferring with the Epworth league committee in Chicago next Saturday was taken up and a committee was appointed to represent the Christian Endeavor society. It was made up of President E. A. Clark, of Boston; Rev. E. Dille, of San Francisco, and Professor W. W. Andrews, of Sackville, N. B.

Those in charge of the movement say it is not entirely a sys-tematic move on their part, but that they have as much to complain of as they have as much to complain of as the barbers or any other class in the matter of Sunday work. One of the leaders said "There are 20,000 stores in Chicago where clerks are employed. Of that number only the big department stores and a few others close on Sunday and in a great many of the stores clerks are required to work at least part of the day. We want it stopped even if a general strike is necessary to accomplish it."

TO CANDY ORANGE AND LEMON PEEL.

To candy orange and lemon peel, throw the peel as you collect it into salt water and let it stand two or three weeks. Remove from the brine, wash well in clean, cold water, and boil until tender in fresh water. It will take about three hours for lemon peel and two for orange. Drain from the water and drop into a thin syrup made in the proportion of one pound of sugar to one pint of water; simmer gently until the peel is transparent and the syrup almost boiled away. Drain the pieces and drop into a thick syrup which must be bofling; remove from the fire and stir until the whole looks white, then lift out each piece of peel and roll it in granulated sugar. When quite dry pack in jars with tissue paper between the fayers.—Ladles' Home Journal salt water and let it stand two or three

MONTANA'S WILD MAN

Further Particulars as to His Strange Life.

BUTTE, Mont. Dec. 12 .- George Pettingill, the "wild man of the Wise River mountains," who was found dead a few days ago, far from his usual haunts, about forty miles southwest of Butte, was a strange character in life. For was a strange character in life. For more than thirty years he had lived alone among the wild animals of the mountains and shunned everything that had the appearance of civilization. His life, previous to his appearance in Montuna at the close of the war, remained a mystery, and only once was an attempt made to question him on that subject.

"Every man has his secrets," he re-led, "and the world should respect

At the time of his death Pettingill was 70 years of age, and it had been his frequent boast that he had never known a day of sickness since he began running wild in the mountains. He was over six feet tail and weighed 175 named and as he ware little clothing. pounds, and as he wore little clothing his body became covered with a heavy growth of hair and only in the very coldest weather did he wear more than coidest weather did he wear more than a breech clout, and went barefooted in the deepest snow. The hair of his head and beard, of an Iron gray color, hung in heavy matted curis down below his walst, each curi containing probably more hair that the head of the average woman. He lived entirely on raw meat which he killed himself. His method was to get on the trail of a deer, elk, bear or moose and run it down. He had been known to follow a deer for a week or ten days, and bedeer, elk, bear or moose and run it down. He had been known to follow a deer for a week or ten days, and being tireless himself, the deer somer or later fell a victim to his endurance and knife. After killing the animal would camp near the carcass and main there until he had consumed it. The only shelter the man had was a rude cabin built half into a mountain near the junction of the Wise and Big Hole rivers and formed by bended it trees. This he called his "head-quarters" On one side of the cabin there was a perfect imprint of a human form, at the head of which was a pleee of wood, worn hollow in the middle. The spot had been the old man's "bed" or sleeping place for more than thirty years. About once a far Pettingill visited Dewey, a settlement near his place, but with the exception of these visits he never associated with human beings. He has frequently been encountered in the mountains by parties of hunters and treated very civilly all who sought to engage him in conversation. A Butte photographer once went out to his haunts and offered him $200 for the privilege of taking his picture, but Pettingill would not have it The photographer, however, tried to take him unawares, but Pettingill causht him in the act and took the costly camera away from the photographer and smashed it to pieces. The only photographer, who caught the old man on a snap shot while he was "dressed up for company."

up for company."
One day recently Pettingill called at the cabin of an old miner near Silver Star and asked for something to each which was given him. He then laid down in the sun to take a nap. About an hour later the miner attempted to awaken him and found him dead. Since his death several persons have claimed to have identified him as an old hunter and backwoodsman who lived near La Crosse, Wis, in the latter part of the 'Si's. There were a great many Indians in that part of the country at that time, and, according to the story, they attacked Pettingill and his partner and killed the latter, whereupon Pettingill swore eternity wenegance upon all indians, and siaged out to annihilhate the race and was in a fair way to carry out his threat when he was arrested for murder, tred and acquitied. About that time the war broke out and he enlisted in the Twentieth regiment and served threat years. It is stated that he got into a quarrel with an officer and killed him in a duel and then came to Montana.

The only account Pettingill was ever known to give of his life was that he was born in Concord, N. H., and went to Wisconsin in 1845, and from there entered the army. He subsequently came to Montana out of pure love for advented the subsequently came to Montana out of pure love for advented the subsequently came. One day recently Pettingill called at D. A. interested in British politics. I was converted to Liberalism, so called, by an incident which I deem well worth relating.
One afternoon I entered a bo one afternoon I entered a booksnoy in High Holborn and found that the Hon. William E. Gladstone had preceded me thither. I had never seen Mr. Gladstone before. I recognized him now by his resemblance to the caricatures and by his unlikeness to the portraits which the newspapers had ordured. As Languaged the spon I

The bookseller then proceeded to tell me that whenever Gladstone entered a bookshop he made a practice of buying everything in sight. That magnificent, sweeping gesture of his comprehended everything—theology, history, social science, folklore, medicine, travel, blography—everything that came to his net was fish.

"This is the third time Mr. Gladstone has visited me," said the bookseller.

rule must be just after all."

From others infimately acquainted with him I learned that Gladstone was an omnivorous reader; that he ordered his books by the cartload, and that his home in Hawarden literally overflowed with books. He made a practice, I was told, of overhauling his library once in so often and of weeding out such volumes as he do not care to keep. These discarded These discarded second-hand dealnot care to keep. These discarded books were sent to second-hand dealers, and it is said that the dealers not infrequently took advantage of Glad-stone by reselling him over and over again—and at advanced prices, too— the very lots of books he had culled out and rejected.—Chicago Record.
